COMMUNICATED. BEAUTY.-I presume you remember the old legend, related by Latin bards, who have long since sought their apartments of "six by two," in order to veil their saintly visages against this world of calumny, about Theseus descending to the realms of Pluto, pine's beauty in a small chest.

But like the rest of the "frail fair," she allowed her curiosity, that world prevailing "BAUGH'S RAW BONE SUPER-PHOSdemon, to get the upper hand of her better judgment. Unable to resist longer, the goddess raised the lid, and well may we imagine her surprise, on seeing a small nothingness, vulgarly called vapor, to ascend, and mix with the surrounding air, until invisible.

So it is with all terrestrial "beauty." It is a mere vapor, and I will give you logic to prove it, to-wit-you cannot feel it, you cannot hear it, you cannot smell it, nor you cannot taste it. What can you do with it? Nothing more than you can with a vapor. That is, you can see it. Now, for the conclusion, as I have given you the premises. Any thing that you cannot feel, hear, smell, nor taste, is surely something that is liable at any moment to ranish. Therefore beauty is logically, literally, and figuratively speaking, a vapor. What an idiot must a man be, who would chose such "airy nothingness" as beauty. A something that he can exert but one of the five senses upon, and that too, for so short a time. You may feast with your eyes, but it will be a feast of vapor, or on a fleeting show. Beauty is not of munity a Stimulant, Pure, Healthful and invigo-"Beauty thou fantastic ape,

Who dost in every country change thy shape, &c." And as Lorenzo Dow says: "That's true, and you can't deny it." The old parable, "If I settle upon a standard of beauty in London, it will not do when I get to Pekin,' holds good, and is plainly exemplified in of a wealthy merchant in one of our Western of the poisonous substance known as Fusil Oil cities, exceedingly beautiful; but coming into the far-famed valley of this good old Commonwealth, he found the standard to be somewhat different, and as he thought preferable; as he gave up his adoration for the "city beauty," and devoted his soul to a farmer's daughter. I heard that enthusiastic elecutionist sigh and say, "life, thou fleeting show-beauty thou fantastic ape," and as he closed his speech, so closes beauty, VIX.

A REMINISCENCE.—Some years ago, I was staying for some weeks in a town in a neigh- pectfully, boring State, and was present at a series of sermous, delivered by the Rev. Mr. Newlight, of the Church Militant, to an anxious and admiring congregation. This gentleman was fond of preaching from certain or A GRICULTURAL IMPLEMENT AND rather uncertain parts of Scriptuze—he was a close student of the prophecies, and had one great sermon from Ezekiel, I believe, Would respectfully invite the attention of the Farcalled his "Wheel Sermon," which ought mers of Maryland and Virginia to their large and to be published to the world. The series of discourses I heard, were on the subject of FARMING IMPLEMENTS, the second advent, or the return to, and personal reign of Christ on the earth, which he said he believed, according to prophecies not OUR STOCK will embrace the most approved vet fulfilled, would soon, perhaps very variety of soon, take place. In his closing discourse, PLOWS AND CASTINGS. being anxious to finish the subject, he spoke for an hour and twenty minutes. He, in that discourse, earnestly disclaimed, in fact, Horse Powers and Threshing Machines, almost denounced Millerism, but before he ended, said as nearly as remembered, as follows:

"I believe there are persons present in I never leave home, I never hear a clap of the standard of the thunder, that I am not prepared for the final consummation of all things." If this GUANO, BONE DUST, doctrine is not exactly Millerism, it seems very nearly akin to it. Poor Miller, in the confusion of his brain, has fixed on next year, next month, and next week, I believe, and when his prediction failed, went over his calculation again, and fixed the time anew. The doctrine thus preached, differs from that of Miller only by part of a life time, and to HIM to whom "a thousand years are as one day," this difference is small, inabout the close of his vaticinations, the Rev. gentleman called on a leading member of his church, a good, plain, sensible, shrewd man, Deacon Large, and said to him, "Deacon, I have a tract of wild land in the western part of this State, which I wish to sell to you; it is not worth much now, but, I think, will, in ten years, become very valuable." "Oh! replied the Deacon that will be too late." "How so? said our clerical friend?" Why, said the Deacon, "according to your doctrine, it will probably in less time, all be burnt up." Good morning QUAMDIU. Deacon, said Neverdie.
